

Despite extensive efforts on the part of the HE sector significant improvements to satisfaction with assessment and feedback remains largely elusive. Why? This presentation will take a step back from policy and initiatives in order to examine how assumptions may colour our attitudes and approaches to assessment and feedback. In so doing new possibilities for improving practice are revealed.